in this dance has been able to maintain health and improve body balance . In fact , according to a study conducted by scientists from the University of Washington , tango can help improve balance and activity of people with Parkinson's . The study was conducted by giving training to tango about 19 people with Parkinson's . These patients follow exercises in classes between 20 minutes to an hour . Parkinsonism or paralysis agitans is a degenerative neurological disease that was first discovered in 1817 by Dr. James Parkinson . The cause of this disease because no tissue damage to the cerebellum and spinal cord . Many thought the disease is caused by a virus , but that is true because of heredity or genetic mutation and several other causes . As a result , the movement of people affected by Parkinson's body was inhibited .

Particular case is often found that people suddenly fall without cause or can not maintain the balance . The most severe , the cessation of body movement suddenly and could not control the motor nerves of the body . However , there is now little hope to help people with Parkinson's is giving a special class of tango . In a study led by Gammon M Earhart , assistant professor of physical therapy the University of Washington , tango courses given to patients with this disease make their condition better . Tango classes for people with Parkinson's clearly different to the share given to normal people . portions are given for example in the form of stretching , balance exercises , tango -style walking , footwork patterns , how to move , and finally tried to dance with or without a partner . besides the tango movements for people with Parkinson 's at 40 minute workout exercises followed seated stand with the help of a chair to strengthen the muscles of the foot . Finally , after following the course of several weeks , the disease showed significant improvements for increasing the ability to move his body . In fact , the ability of patients with Parkinson's showed his balance back .

Tidal tango began in the early 20th century , dancers and orchestra from Buenos Aires to go to Europe , and attracted many first tango in Paris , followed by London , Berlin and other capital city in Europe .
